SPARKLE KLAXON! Stretchy, spangly and not for wallflowers, lurex – that’s metallic yarn to you and us – is heading into stores by the truckload: case in point being Beyoncé’s technicolour-dream dress (far right) nabbed straight from the catwalk of Italian designer Marco de Vincenzo just weeks after his A/W ’15 show.

But it’s not just eveningwear; roll necks, tees and tracksuit bottoms all look better in lurex, with retro stripes tapping into the ’70s trend that fashion won’t tire of any time soon. Kate Bosworth (right) nailed it for day, pairing her lux-ed-up tank top with jeans, and we’ll be paying homage with M&S’s shimmering version (3) – yep, our high street go-tos are in on the action, too.

With grey skies overhead, we could all use a little sparkle, and these magpie buys prove all that glitters isn’t gold – sometimes it’s maroon, or rainbow striped, instead.

1. Skirt, £335, Marco de Vincenzo (farfetch.com). 2. Tracksuit bottoms, £230, Peter Jensen (peterjensen.co.uk). 3. Top, £25, Marks & Spencer (marksandspencer.com). 4.
